

ADDITIONAL READINGS FROM NEPOS' LIFE OF ATTICUS

1. THE PEOPLE OVER FORTUNE

Atticus is friend to the people, not to fortune.

CORNĒLIĪ NEPŌTIS ATTICUS, 9.3–6

In the previous section you read that Antony was sent into exile, and that his wife Fulvia and his children were threatened by persecution. Marcus Antonius, or Mark Antony, a fascinating and contradictory political figure (since tradition has presented him either as a villain or as a powerful and enchanting leader destroyed by his own weakness), was losing ground at that time. Everybody seemed to be against him, backed by the authority of the senate and fueled by Cicero's eloquence, who delivered his famous orations called The Philippics. These were named after the speeches of the Greek orator Demosthenes and were delivered against the Macedonian king Philip. The word "Philippic" remained proverbial for any fiery accusation. Atticus, literary adviser, publisher and banker, as well as an intimate friend of Cicero, found himself in a delicate situation with regard to his relationship with Antony.

- 1 9. 3. Atticus cum Cicerōnis intimā familiāritāte ūterētur, amīcissimus esset Brūtō, nōn modo nihil hīs indulſit ad Antōnium violandum, sed ē contrāriō familiārēs ēiū ex urbe profugientēs, quantum potuit, tēxit, quibus rēbus indiguērunt, adiūvit. 4. . . . Ipsī Fulviae, cum lītibus 5 distinērētur māgnīsque terrōribus vexārētur, tantā diligentiā officium suūm praestitit, ut nūllum illa stiterit vadimōnium sine Atticō; spōnsor omnium rērum fuerit.

VOCABULARY

- 1 cum + subjunctive – although
 intimus*, a, um – most intimate, closest
 familiāritās*, familiāritatis, f. – familiarity
 ūtor + ablative – to avail oneself of, use, enjoy amicus*, a, um – friendly
- 2 modo (adv.) – only indulgeō, ēre, indulsi, indultum + dative – to be indulgent, grant as a favor to violō, āre, āvī, ātum – to violate, harm
- 3 ē contrāriō – on the contrary
 familiāris*, familiāris, m./f. – family member profugiō, ere, profūgī, — – to run away, flee
 tegō*, ere, tēxī, tēctum – to cover, protect
- 4 indigeō, ēre, indiguī, — + ablative – to lack, need
 adiuvō*, āre, adiūvī, adiūtum – to help
- 5 distineō, ēre, distinuī, distentum – to hold apart, distract
 terror, terrōris, m. – terror vexō, āre, āvī, ātum – to trouble, harass diligentia*, ae, f. – carefulness, attentiveness officium, ī, n. – favor, duty
- 6 praestō*, āre, praestitī, praestitum – to make available, supply
 vadimōnium, ī, n. – guarantee that the defendant
 will appear before the judge: vadimōnium sistere (sistō, sistere, stīti) – to show up in court to answer bail spōnsor, spōnsōris, m. – guarantor, one who formally guarantees the good faith of another

READING NOTES

1–2 Atticus cum ... nōn modo nihil... sed Note that cum in this sentence has a meaning similar to “although,” and the thought contrasting with cum is marked by nōn modo nihil... sed....

3 familiārēs ēius “His family members” refers to Anthony’s relatives.

6 illa “she” refers to Fulvia.

CORNĒLIĪ NEPŌTIS ATTICUS, 9.3–6, CONTINUED

5. Quīn etiam, cum illa fundum secundā fortūnā ēmisset in diem neque post calamitātem versūram facere potuisset, ille sē interposuit pecūniāmque sine faenore sineque ūllā stipulatiōne crēdidit, maximum existimāns quaestum memorem grātumque cognōscī simulque aperiēns sē nōn fortūnae, sed hominibus solēre esse amīcum. 6. Quae cum faciēbat, nēmō eum temporis causā facere poterat existimāre. Nēminī enim in opīniōnem veniēbat Antōnium rērum potītūrum . . .

VOCABULARY

- 7 quīn etiam – and furthermore fundus, ī, m. – country estate, farm secundus – following, favorable, second
- 8 *emō, ere, ēmī, emptum – to buy
in diem – for a future day
*calamitās, calamitātis, f. – disaster, misfortune, calamity
versūra, ae, f. – exchanging one creditor for another
- 9 interpōno, ere, interposuī, intepositum – to put between; sē interpōnere – to intervene, interfere faenus, faenorū, n. – interest, profit stipulatiō, stipulatiōnis, f. – demanding of a guarantee from a prospective debtor
- 10 crēdō – to lend money, believe
*existimō, āre, āvī, ātum – to value, esteem, think quaestus, quaestūs, m. – profit *memor, memoris – remembering, mindful (of one's obligations)
*grātus, a, um – thankful, appreciative
- 11 *cōgnōscō, ere, cōgnōvī, cōgnitum – to get to know, find to be
- 12 quae = et haec
temporis causā – to suit the occasion
- 13 *opīniō, opīniōnis, f. – opinion, mind
- 14 potior, potīrī, potitus sum + genitive – to make oneself master of, take possession of

*Words marked with an asterisk will need to be memorized later in the chapter.

READING NOTES

- 7–8 cum illa fundum secundā fortūnā ēmisset The phrase secundā fortūnā means “in favorable circumstances.” Originally meaning “following,” or “blowing in the direction of one’s course,” here secundus means “favorable.” You have already learned that secundus can mean “second.”
in diem This expression which means “by a future day” indicates that the farm she bought was to be paid for by a future, agreed-upon day.
- 9 versūram facere The phrase versūram facere means “to refinance a loan with a new creditor.”
- 10–11 maximus existimāns quaestum memorem grātumque cognōisci “Thinking that the greatest profit was to be found mindful of his obligations and thankful . . .”
- 12 aperiēns The verb aperiō, -īre, aperuī, apertum can mean not only “to open,” but also “to reveal.”
eum This accusative subject of an indirect statement refers to Atticus.
- 14 Nēminī . . . in opīniōnem veniēbat The phrase in opīniōnem venire (with the dative indicating the person involved) means “to occur to” someone.
Antōnium rērum potītūrum The word rēs in the plural often means simply “affairs” or “circumstances.”

COMPREHENSION QUESTIONS

Answer the following questions in Latin using the text on pp. 378 and 380. The Reading Vocabulary may be consulted.

1. Eratne Atticus Cicerōnis amīcus?
2. Eratne Atticus Brūtī amīcus?
3. Erantne Cicero et Brūtus Antōniī amīcī?
4. Quōcum stābat Atticus, cum Cicerōne et Brūtō, an (or) cum Antōniō?
5. Quid fēcit Atticus, cum Antōniī familiārēs Rōmā fugerent?
6. Quid fiēbat illō tempore Fulviae, Antōniī uxōrī?
7. Quibus duōbus modis Atticus Fulviam adiūvit?
8. Quid Atticus maximum quaestum existimābat?
9. Putābantne hominēs ab Atticō Fulviam temporis causā adiuvārī? Cūr?

VOCABULARY TO LEARN

NOUNS

calamitās, calamitātis, f. – disaster, misfortune, calamity

familiāritās, familiāritatis, f. – familiarity

diligentia, ae, f. – carefulness, attentiveness, diligence

opīniō, opīniōnis, f. – opinion, mind

ADJECTIVES

amīcus, a, um – friendly

familiāris, familiāris, m./f. – family member, close friend

grātus, a, um – thankful, appreciative

intimus, a, um – most intimate, closest

memor, memoris + genitive – remembering, mindful of (usually of one's obligations)

VERBS

adiuvō, āre, adiūvī, adiūtum – to help

cōgnōscō, ere, cōgnōvī, cōgnitum – to get to know, find to be

emō, ere, ēmī, emptum – to buy

existimō, āre, āvī, ātum – to value, esteem, think

praestō, āre, praestīti, praestitum – to make available, supply

tegō, ere, tēxī, tēctum – to cover, protect

► EXERCISE 1

The following conversation might have taken place between Atticus and Fulvia during the period in which she was in trouble. Fulvia, married to Mark Antony (this was her third marriage), was a very active person in the politics of the late republic, and in some ways a prototype of the future empresses.

Fill in the blanks using the correct form of the verbs and phrases in parentheses. Then translate the dialogue into English. The Reading Vocabulary may be consulted.

Atticus: Salvē, Fulvia! Quōmodo hodiē valēs?

Fulvia: Tot lītibus distineor et tantīs terrōribus vexor ut _____ (mihi vīrēs iam nōn sunt). Quis mē miserrimam adiuvābit?

Atticus: Ipse ad tē vēnī ut _____ (auxilium tibi ferō). Parātus sum omnia prō tē facere. Quid est mihi faciendum?

Fulvia: Ad iūdicem mihi est eundum. Licetne mihi tē rogāre ut _____ (spōnsor meus fīēs)?

Atticus: Nūllum vadimōnium sistere dēbēbis sine mē. Semper veniam ut tē _____ (adiuvō). Tēcum semper ambulābō.

Fulvia: Grāta sum, Attice, vir optime, prō benevolentiā tuā, et semper hūius reī memor erō. Sī maritus meus Rōmam redīre _____ (potest), multa officia tibi praestābit.

Atticus: Tē adiuvāre volō, quia nōn mihi placet amīcōs in calamitātibus relinquere. Nūlla alia est causa.

Fulvia: At mihi est quoque alia calamitās.

Atticus: Dīcās mihi _____ (quid est)!

Fulvia: Fundum in diem ēmī, sed nunc versūram facere nōn possum, quamquam cōnor.

Atticus: Pecūniām tibi crēdam sine faenore et sine stipulātiōne.

Fulvia: At pecūniā sine faenore mihi crēditā, nūllus quaestus erit tibi.

Atticus: Existimō _____ (maximus quaestus est grātum memoremque cognōisci). Valē nunc, Fulvia! Posteā veniam ut _____ (pecūniām tibi dō) et ut _____ (ad iūdicem īmus).

Fulvia: Valē, vir amīcissime!